Excerpt: .and the Chapel of Holy Cross became a windmill. The original building, built for worship and used for milling, has long disappeared, and the present one, built as a mill and now used as a church, took its place. No attempt has been made to alter the character of the interior, whose oddly timbered circular space is simply fitted with altar, rush-bottomed chairs, and cocoa-nut matting, the great beams painted and here and there stencilled.with ecclesiastical designs. A rental of one shilling a year is paid for the use of the building to Lady Henry Somerset. All the way from Reigate Heath to Buckland the North Downs are seen going in a procession to the right, beneath them nowadays springing up the country homes of a generation that loves scenery and can scarce understand why our grandfathers did not appreciate it. Thoroughly typical of the old time was Captain Morris, author of those town-loving lines-- In town let me live, then; in town let me die; For no, I can t relish the country, not I. If one must have a cottage in summer to dwell, O give me the sweet shady side of Pall Mall. His aspiration was denied him, for that eighteenthcentury Anacreon died here at Brockham. A solemn row of immemorial yews along the shoulders of the hills marks where the sandalled feet of pilgrims trod the Pilgrims Way. At Buckland a pond, a sign-post, a tall elm, and a church...
