Excerpt: . . . groups of rocks and admired the harmony of colours and lines, and often have I marvelled at the effect thus produced. One day when I called the attention of a lover of nature to these beauty spots in the garden, he said I have often come to this garden and have felt the charm of the place, but I have not particularly noticed how these rocks have been laid out. I see exquisite beauty in them now that you have called my attention to them. But I think that is a great compliment to the artist, for I have lived among the mountains so long and been inured to the beautiful way in which Nature works in her garden that I would have noticed them if they had not been in harmony with the charm of the place. Years of experience and a close observation of nature have taught our landscape architects the secret of art. INTERIOR OF JAPANESE HOUSE, AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION, SAN FRANCISCO It is always the aim of our gardeners to make the best use of the piece of ground placed at their disposal. They lay out their gardens in such a way that from the house the effect will be one of limitless expanse. If, on the one hand, there are undesirable objects in the neighbourhood, they are hidden from sight by the placing of tall trees in the garden. And if, on the other hand, there is a...
