Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from East Coast Historical Records In the fourth and fifth decades of the nineteenth century the portion of the coast of New Zealand extending from Hicks Hay to Wairoa in Hawke's Bay, about 140 miles in length, and now comprised in the counties of Waiapu, Cook and Wairoa, was commonly known by the whalers and traders who frequented it as The East Coast, and this is the region with which the following reminiscences are more immediately connected. The district is very hilly, the ranges near the coast varying from 200 or 300 feet to an altitude of over 2000 feet, the highest point in this part of the island being Mount Hikurangi, which reaches nearly 6000ft. The population was to be found generally within a short distance of the coast, though in a few favourable localities it extended as far as 20 or 30 miles inland, the mountainous parts of the interior being altogether without inhabitants, except that there were fortified strongholds, in places difficult of access, to which people might retreat when hard-pressed by...
