Not illustrated. 1895 Excerpt: . . . and a well settled and comparatively homogeneous population, it may not be so clearly the duty of the Government to actively protect them all and prevent them from being crippled or ruined through want of intelligent management. But here, where the whole community is in constant peril of financial, social and political disaster, because of its dependence upon one industry only, it would seem to be the duty of our Government to follow the example of the governments of other countries in seeking to create and build up new industries, especially such as will promote the growth of the political institutions which now exist. Estimated Value Of Coffee Plantations. --Regarding the coffee industry as a source of Government revenue, the Commission is informed that in the island of Ceylon, the coffee plants have, when in full bearing, for some purposes, the value of one dollar a...
