RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 34 pages. Original publisher: Emmitsburg, Md. : Federal Emergency Management Agency, U. S. Fire Administration, National Fire Data Center, 1989 OCLC Number: (OCOlc)76802881 Subject: Warehouses -- Fires and fire prevention -- Illinois -- Mount Prospect. Excerpt: . . . USFA-TR-030 October 1988 5 Although the system as actually designed and installed contained this fire, it is likely that fewer heads would have operated and the fire might have been contained by in-rack sprinklers if they had been present. This would predictably have limited the degree of water damage. Although a final dollar value was unavailable at the time of this report, the fire loss estimates place it at over one million dollars. Successful operation of the sprinkler system, and the efficient manner in which the fire department attacked the fire, prevented it from spreading into the adjacent data processing rooms. These areas were found with several inches of water on the floor; however, no damage was suffered by any of the equipment. leSSonS leARneD 1. A well organized monitoring and alarm reporting system enables fires to be responded to earlier in their progress. The smooth interaction of the private monitoring system with the Northwest Central Fire Dispatch Center, which actually coordinates all fire departments in the surrounding villages, was instrumental in the outcome of this incident. 2. Even though the sprinkler system was not designed to handle the commodity type and storage configuration employed, it contained the fire. An excessive number of heads fused as the system attempted to cope with the set fires. The combination of a prompt alarm and effective fire department response produced a favorable outcome in this incident. The lack of in-rack sprinklers and the lower design density might have been ineffective in confining...
