Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.0in. x 0.6in.Rommels Back Box is a story about the most revered treasure of The Desert Fox, Field Marshall Irwin Rommel. The black box contains those things that were most cherished by the Field Marshall. It was part of an array of spoils seized during the African Campaign segment of WW II. The box changed hands a few times before coming to its half century resting place. After sitting for fifty plus years the box was on the move again and immediately the killings started just as they had in the past when the box did not have a home. The book is about retired NYPD homicide Detective Michael Mickey Ross who inadvertently, as a private investigator, becomes involved in the search for the black box. The theme of the story centers on the treasure of the Desert Fox and the surreptitious relationship that existed between the Field Marshall and a USAAC (Army Air Corp. ) General that was in charge of the European-African-Middle Eastern Theater. The treasure flown by the USAAC from Tunisia, off the north-east coast of Africa, never made it to its pre-determined designation, Corsica, The box traveled to a number of places around the world including the Island of Sardinia off the coastline of Italy and Vero Beach part of the Treasure Coast of Florida. On the northeast coast of the USA it found its way to the Hamptons on Long Island and to Westchester County just north of NYC. During its journey it left a trail of death, destruction, excitement, terror, and in just one case, happiness. Michael Mickey Ross is a fictional character I created within the scheme of my imagination. Although he is fictional I have...
